

Initially, my Recipe model included fields for `name`, `cooking_time`, `ingredients`, and `difficulty`. I decided to add `pic`, `author`, and `instructions` to enhance the model. The pic field will give users a visual idea of the expected outcome of the recipe. The author field allows users to contact the recipe creator for any adjustments or tips to improve the recipe. Including instructions provides a step-by-step guide rather than just listing ingredients.

For the Users model, I originally had `name` and `username` fields. However, I wanted to give users a way to add a personal touch, so I included a `pic` field for their profile picture. Additionally, I added a `bio` field to allow users to provide background information about themselves, which helps others see if they share similar interests.
